

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Senator Bob Wagner is worried. Three difficult problems, upon the determination of which hang important legislative and administrative developments, bear heavily on the mind of the hard-working liberal New Yorker. They are:

1.—Whether he should step out as chairman of the National Labor Board in order to devote all his time to major social measures at the next session of Congress, or try to continue both as a Senator and Labor chairman.

2.—Labor dissatisfaction over what it considers to be undue delay by Wagner in settling labor disputes.

3.—Strained relations between Wagner and General Hugh Johnson.

The last two situations may have an important bearing on Wagner's decision on the first. The coolness between Johnson and Wagner arises out of the latter's quiet, but firm, insistence that others keep their hands off the affairs of the Labor Board. The Board is an outgrowth of the NRA. But Wagner and his colleagues were appointed by the President, and in the executive order creating the Board, Roosevelt established it as an independent agency.

Johnson has not meddled in the work of the Board. But both workers and employers have privately complained to him about the Board's endless delay in settling disputes.

THE FORD PLANT CASE

A delegation of strikers of the Chester, Pa., Ford plant protested bitterly to Johnson that Wagner's failure to force a prompt decision had resulted in the disintegration of their union.

"Once we had to combat violence by the employer and his thugs," they told Johnson. "We knew how to fight that. Now we are being smashed by official procrastination. The boss doesn't have to lift a finger."

Johnson sympathized with the strikers' complaints, but explained that the situation was not his to deal with. He promised, however, to do what he could.

To this end he asked the A. F. of L. to submit to him all evidence of Ford violation of the automobile code. As chief of the NRA he could proceed against the manufacturer as a code violator. When word of Johnson's action became public, Wagner said nothing. (Continued on Page 3)

Vessel Fast On Sand Will Be Salvaged

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 22.—UP.—Crew of the Matson freighter Maliko shifted cargo to the stern tonight in an effort to free the vessel from the beach between Tiburon and Paradise Cove, Marin county.

The freighter rammed her bow deeply into rocks and sand during a heavy fog. The bow rested in only six inches of water at one stage of the tide. The vessel did not list, however, and it was expected she would be freed with ease.

Tugs stood by to attempt to pull her into deep water at a signal from Captain E. R. Johanson. The 5847-ton vessel has a crew of 40 men aboard.

"Leak" Reports In Silver Price to Bring Probe

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—UP.—Demands for full investigation of reports of a "leak" in President Roosevelt's silver program came from Senator Thomas, Dem., Oklahoma tonight after charges that brokers and speculators had cashed in heavily on premature information.

The White House professed to know nothing of the reported leak. First reports that brokers and speculators had had advance information of the President's plan to raise silver to 64½ cents an ounce came in a telegram to a western senator who declined to permit the use of his name.

HOTEL MEN WARNED ON RUM SALES

Representatives of the hotel board of equalization yesterday warned county hotel owners that hard liquor could be sold in restaurants or hotels as a hotel service either with or without meals. Service of beer and wine as a hotel service is permitted.

These facts were stressed yesterday by county representatives of the board. It was declared that in many communities in the county a misinterpretation of ruling of the state board on the liquor law.

The state board has laid down a policy of permission of drinking of hard liquor in hotels and restaurants with meals but these businesses are not permitted to sell hard liquors as a service.

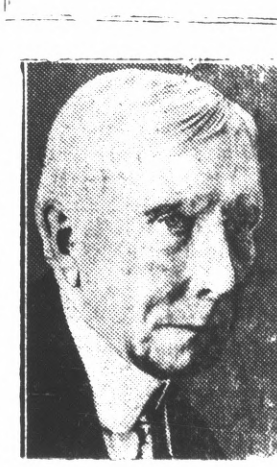

Hard liquors may only be purchased from establishments that have off sale permits, it was stated.

The law, however, makes no prohibition against an individual purchasing hard liquor from another establishment and taking it to a restaurant or hotel for consumption with meals or one may even delegate a waiter to make a purchase for him.

The interpretation of the state board is expected to bring about the establishment by many hotel and restaurants of adjuncts with "off sale" permits.

The board is engaged in a campaign of education, and it wants to disabuse the minds of those persons who believe that the board's ruling permits the sale of hard liquor in restaurants and hotels. Such sale is prohibited.

Carlson's Contentions Sustained

Attorney Tom M. Carlson, won a second victory in the Fuller case, when the district court of appeals, sustained the decision of Superior Judge A. B. McKenzie.

The decision upholds the holographic will of the late Harriet S. Fuller, well-known Remington widow.

The decision granting the bulk of the estate to Mrs. Frances R. Nelle was handed down by Judge McKenzie in February, 1932, after a trial that lasted three weeks. Mrs. Nelle was represented by Attorney Carlson.

The case, when tried in superior court, was marked by opposing opinions on handwriting made by E. O. Heinrich, criminologist of Berkeley, and J. Clark Sellers of Los Angeles, who appeared in the dual case. The judge held the matter will made by the late Harriet S. Fuller and her husband, Clifford A. Fuller, in which Mrs. Nelle received only $500 had been revoked by Mrs. Fuller after the death of her husband and that the holographic will executed by Mrs. Fuller thereafter was a valid will. In the latter will, which the court sustained, Mrs. Nelle is to receive the bulk of the estate, which is valued at approximately $21,000.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 22—UP—

In the petition of the defendant asking for transfer of the case to federal court, it was pointed out that the controversy involved a contract between citizens in different states and therefore a matter for a federal court.

not always in your hands. This poison enters your whole body. Movements get hard and slow. You get nervous, tense, irritable, impatient, and suspicious. You lose your taste, gas, diarrhea, headaches. You have become an ugly looking, foul-smelling, sour-thinking person. You have lost your personal charm. Everybody wants to run from you.

But there are salts, mineral waters, laxative pills, laxative cathartics or chewing gums and expect them to get rid of this poison that destroys your personal charm. They can't do it, for they only move out the last end of some acids and some debris. They don't touch the acidic poison. They can't reach it at all.

Your Good Health

Initiative and Good Health Are the Results Of Boy Scout Training

ONE of the greatest health movements of our time has its source in the organizations known as the Boy and Girl Scouts. The thousands of youngsters belonging to these supervised groups are doing more than many mature societies to insure to future generations the vigorous bodies they need as well as mental and moral health. Their training involves active outdoor life with instruction in camping, swimming, and many fresh air activities, besides guidance in arts and crafts for which they will find use in mature years.

DR. CHRISTIAN

A SCOUT is carefully educated in conserving his health and is shown not only how to take care of himself, but of others, when they need help. Since each Scout troop must have a supervising Scout committee of five men and a Scout Master must be over twenty-one years of age, the combination of maturity and youth is a happy one and good for both. Under this supervision, the Scout gets a very practical education. He knows how to make a fire if he gets chilled on a long hike, or he understands fighting a fire in a forest, or burning buildings. Firemen everywhere are glad to train these eager applicants for Firemen's Merit Badges while the police force is very glad to accept the school boys who help reduce the accidents at street intersections near our school houses.

THE Scout knows what to do in a panic and how to untangle a traffic jam. He shows the greatest enthusiasm in the classes for teaching first aid. Many of these little fellows, boys or girls, could put to shame the older ones of our generation by their skill in sterilizing and bandaging a wound, stopping a hemorrhage, or making a broken bone comfortable until help can be secured. The Scout record for saving drowning persons is growing steadily, through his ability to bring a helpless person to shore and apply artificial respiration.

WHEN the Scout goes hiking he knows how to care for his feet and general comfort. He recognizes poisonous growths and avoids them along with poisonous insects. He is much more careful about his food and inspects the milk and water supply more wisely than most grown-up picnicers. He was the first to lose in the woods, he could find himself eventually by his family's wish trees, the direction of the wind or the position of the stars. If he must remain in the woods over night, he will have a comfortable bed, and the next day is likely to find him still well and unharmed.

HE DOES many dangerous things safely because he has been taught to do them in the right way. Counting has a fine way of teaching for the crippled or the lame. For them, there are various activities in the form of handicraft, such as making a model of a ship, or a model of a house, or a model of a machine. They are greatly helped by the means of self-expression. The companionship afforded by the bonds of organization makes invalid days less tedious and hastens recovery.

THE youth who come to maturity under training that fosters the conservation of their own well being are sure to maintain in future years an interest in public health. They will be the more inclined to cooperate in all organized efforts made toward community education in healthy living. One of their several slogans is, "Health through understanding, and safety through skill."

To Clean a Rug

A fine rug may be cleaned with gasoline and sawdust. Mix the ingredients to a thin paste and scrub the rug with it. This should be done outdoors for fear of a fire. When the rug is dry after this treatment, brush and shake out the cornmeal and sawdust and leave it in the open air until the odor has evaporated.

When Sewing Buttons

When sewing on buttons that will have to bear a considerable strain, put a piece of old kid glove under the material to which the button is to be sewn. The cloth will never tear away if this is done.

BEAUTY HINTS FOR THE GIRL SEEKING CHARM

By JACQUELINE HUNT

BEFORE you can take the first step toward remaking your face, you must be able to see yourself with the keen understanding of a sympathetic critic. Study the face that looks back at you from your mirror as carefully as you would the face of a perfect stranger. What features do you notice first? What is it that you would like others to notice?

If it's an unattractive feature that you notice first then try to find ways to make it recede from the limelight. Which feature is most noticeable? Your eyes? They are what you want everyone to notice, then. Look at your eyebrows first? Do they form the right frame for your eyes? Be careful! Don't be in a hurry to change the arch of your brows.

First, pluck the hairs that stray out of line, pulling them in the direction in which they grow. Brush them carefully into line with a small brush dipped into cream or olive oil. If your brows are dark you needn't worry any further about them. If they are too light use a harmless eyebrow pencil or mascara to darken them, but watch out for dye.

Some of the better beauty shops are doing eyebrows and lashes safely, but so many women have been nearly blinded recently from using commercial lash dyes that I would advise you to do them altogether. Even mascara must be applied with a steady hand or your eyes may become slightly irritated.

Apply the lash color much heavier on the lashes at the outer corners of the eyes since it is those lashes that show when one looks directly at you. For evening wear try one of the very dark green or dark blue mascaras for your lashes. Instead of looking unnatural, they are positively enchanting. Use a delicate shade of blue, green or brown eye shadow with the colored lash darkener.

When you put on your eye shadow sweep your finger upward at the outer corners of your eyes. The only case where this rule doesn't apply is where the eyes are very small and far apart. Then the shadow can be more toward the middle or even toward the inside corners of your eyes. Mix your shadow with a little cream, before you apply it and it will have a higher gloss. Try the trick of drawing your eyebrow pencil lightly upward from the outer corners of your eyes. It gives you a youthful, daring, lovable expression. A line drawn straight out lengthens your eyes and gives you sophistication. Lines downward should be avoided, however, since they are aging.

When you apply your rouge blend it smoothly over your cheek bones and well down the throat into the area under the eyes. Carry just the faintest hint of color all the way out to your hairline on your temples. In some cases you can even use just the thinnest bit of rouge on the outer corners of your eyes. I've told you already how you could use your rouge to make a long nose or a sagging chin less prominent.

There are tricks with face powder, too, that will help you be more lovely to look upon. Using two colors will often do the trick. For evening you can use the powder that you ordinarily use for daytime makeup, smooth it evenly over your foundation preparation, and then dust on a mauve powder. The result is really exquisite. You can also use a darker shade of powder for "coming down a nose" or chin that is too prominent to give more regular, youthful contours.

MODES AND MANNERS

QUESTION: "I have been invited to a formal dance, and am wondering if I should wear gloves. My dress is black velvet."

ANSWER: Some seasons fashion demands that gloves be worn with evening clothes. But this season gloves are optional, and whether you wear them or not you will be correctly attired. Gloves are "must" for street wear and when traveling, however.

QUESTION: "What is the correct thing to do with the knife and fork when sending one's plate along to the hostess for a second helping?"

ANSWER: Once used, silver must not be placed on the table cover again. When passing a plate for second helping, leave the knife and fork across the plate in the same position as is correct at the end of the meal.

CHEER SOMEONE AT CHRISTMAS

By JUDITH WILSON

RIGHT now heart need to be warmed and hope renewed, and there is no better time to do your share of hospitality than this Christmas. Here are many lovely ones you can give, even though it means substituting a cheaper cut of meat for the traditional turkey or roast beef and means fewer courses on your Christmas menu. Fortunately it is easy to entertain now—even in one room if that is all you have.

The menus given above are very inexpensive for a large or small group and you could find nothing more festive. Both of them are simple, but they are traditional red and green color scheme. Have the centerpiece of your table a heap of shiny red and green Christmas tree boughs in a wreath of holly.

Boiled Ham Supreme

The savory ham is the first main course for a ten-pound ham which will serve twelve or fifteen. Wash it thoroughly and put to boil in a large kettle with water to cover and add one-half cup chopped onion, one-half cup parsley, one-half bay leaf, six cloves and six peppercorns. Simmer until the ham is tender and cool in the water. Remove the skin from the end of the ham and rub a good amount of brown sugar into the fat. Score the fat in squares with a sharp knife and decorate with cloves. Bake for one hour in a moderate oven. Arrange on a large platter and put quarter inch slice of orange around the ham. Top each orange slice with a mold of cranberry sauce or jelly. Decorate the top of the ham with whole cranberries.

Molded Pudding

The molded pudding is inexpensive and easy to make. For twelve you will need two packages of orange-flavored gelatin. Dissolve with one cup of hot water. When the mixture is cool add one cup raisins, two cups chopped dates, one and one-half cups currants, two and one-half cups mince, two tablespoons cinnamon and one teaspoon cloves. Pour the pudding into a large ring mold, or into individual molds and serve garnished with whipped cream.

Beef Tongue

If you prefer the second menu, get a large fresh beef tongue. Boil it slowly until tender, remove the skin, trim and put in a casserole. Heat four tablespoons fat, add four tablespoons flour and stir until browned. Add two cups strained, canned tomatoes, two cups meat stock (water from the tongue was parboiled), two tablespoons minced onion, two tablespoons minced celery, one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, a few grains of cayenne and salt and pepper to season. Pour the sauce over the tongue and bake slowly until the meat is very tender. Serve with

Gold-Flecked Gown

A dress that is just the thing for that home dinner and can be worn out on a night of entertainment. A simple model we have in mind is of gold-flecked material which requires no other aid to elegance.

We have mentioned the fact before that costume dresses are made of materials with gold, or in some cases, sequins, which even fastenings are cut from gold of gold and are added to make the dress look like a piece of jewelry.

Women who have heavy-lidded eyes and a heavy-lidded mouth, when they wear these gold-flecked dresses, they look like a piece of jewelry. They look like a piece of jewelry. They look like a piece of jewelry.

Semi-Formal Frock

The "Formal Dress" Compulsion is a thing that should be played off every evening. You do not need to be a model to wear a semi-formal frock. You do not need to be a model to wear a semi-formal frock.

Catholic Spain Places Its Hopes in Young Gil Robles

CATHOLICS who have had to live under the rule of the Spanish Republic into power will be restored to power and count on a strong ally to lead the way. Under the leadership of Jose Maria Gil Robles, the Popular Action Party, backed by the Spanish Jesuits, in coalition with the Agrarian, Conservative Republican and the monarchist Traditionalists (Alfonso's sons), swept the recent Spanish elections and a people's vote held a number of seats in the Cortes. Gil Robles, the son of a college professor, celebrated his thirty-fourth birthday on November 27.

Dynamic and inspiring, he visited every part of Spain in his political campaigning. In some towns his automobile was stoned and he was forced to leave under police escort. But this danger did not check his efforts to crush the Socialists and other left parties. He did not succeed completely, but the success he did achieve has placed him in a foremost position in Spanish politics.

Gil Robles lives quietly in Madrid with his aged mother in a modest apartment near the famous Prado museum and the Jesuit church where the former King Alfonso was married to Queen Victoria Eugenia. A man of regular habits, he has impressed both his friends and enemies with his personal courage, vibrant speech and vigorous personality. He has a faculty for replying rather than attracting those he meets but after a few minutes conversation talks set to like him. Cold and serene he has faced his opponents in parliament with fearless speeches that penetrate every nook and corner of the intimate congressional hall.

UNLIKE most politicians, this young Catholic leader is no usual back-slogger. His conversation, as a rule, is short and snappy and his attitude extremely businesslike. He thinks, makes decisions and talks rapidly. And as for hecklers, he always has a ready response. He was frequently interrupted during his speeches in the constitutional assembly, but he never lost his head. The more excited his opponents became, the more calmly he seemed to become.

Gil Robles was launched on the road to fame by Angel Herrera, former director of the newspaper, El Debate, and now president of the Catholic Action, an organization formed by Herrera and various clerics to defend the interests of Catholics. When the Republic was established, Herrera decided to form a Catholic Party, called National Action, with his young protégé as leader. Later the party was named Popular Action when the government prohibited the use of the word "National," by law.

The young Catholic leader is a lawyer by profession, and a professor of law at the University of Salamanca. When not engaged in his other duties he has found time to write several books on jurisprudence. He began his political career when he was twenty-three years old, being one of the founders of the now defunct popular Social party, inspired by that well-known Spanish attorney, Angel Ossorio Galardo.

He was elected to the Cortes Constituent as a candidate of the Agrarian bloc. His first speech in parliament, his first triumph, when he defended his election, after it had been protested. Later he made noble speeches regarding the religious problem and the suspension of newspapers during the suppression of the freedom of the press. Gil Robles was a member of the parliamentary committee which wrote the Republic's constitution. That document penned the downfall of the Catholic Church from power in Spain because it separated the church and the state, dissolving religious orders, such as the Jesuits, and ended religious teaching in schools. However, as a faithful Catholic, Gil Robles voted against these measures.

Timely Tips

Scrub with the grain of the wood for best results.

Put all kitchen utensils to soak as soon as emptied.

Sweep rugs the way of the pile. Brushing against the grain tends to brush dirt in instead of out.

Potatoes will cook more quickly if left to stand in hot water for about a quarter of an hour before being baked in the oven.

When tying packages to be mailed, dampen the string first and then tie up the parcel. It will hold much tighter for the journey.

HOUSE DIVIDED OFTEN CAUSES FAMILY RIFTS

By MARIAN MAY'S MARTIN

THERE is not much use in trying to control my sons, and a father to me recently. These mother invariably sides with them and all I can do is to raise my face.

For many fathers are in this position. A boy's best friend may be his mother, but his mother may be his father's best friend. A boy's best friend may be his mother, but his mother may be his father's best friend.

NATURE's plan, and nature is for two parents, male and female, and it certainly requires both of them to do a good job for their children until such time as the children are able to fend for themselves. A boy's best friend may be his mother, but his mother may be his father's best friend.

IT IS cases like this that seem to justify the popular belief that women love their children infinitely more than they love their husbands, a statement which is not entirely heartening to the husband. No man wants to feel ousted from his wife's affections, even by his own children. But why doesn't he assert himself, why doesn't he do something about it, you ask. Because, he, very foolishly and possibly out of mistaken consideration for his wife, did not "do" something about it in the beginning. It's too late now, combination is too closely formed, with him on the outside. He is invariably over-ruled. Consequently, in order to preserve any sort of dignity, he takes the attitude that his wife is in entire control of the children, which as a matter of fact is apparent.

WIVES of this type are usually the "deserted" variety. Not getting any recognition at home, the husband quite naturally turns to the world for encouragement, understanding and that seems like a square deal. They very often get anything but a square deal, but in any event they usually have the privilege of speaking their mind, and even of doing a little lording over someone else. A man who doesn't dare open his mouth at home is usually busily engaged "telling the world."

BOYS need a father. Women are frank enough to admit it when they are deprived of one, making it a good excuse for a second marriage. It's not the fault of the boys if they learn not to pay any attention to father's commands, having learned that they are going to be countermanded anyway. Mothers always think their husbands are too severe on their sons, but shouldn't they admit that one male knows another, his weaknesses and his needs?

BUT sometimes a mother will tell you, there is a feeling of antagonism between the boys and their father. There is nothing unusual in that. Sometimes it exists, although we will admit not as often, between mother and daughter. Yet it does not alter the fact that they have a better understanding of each other.

IT'S still impossible to serve two masters, even though one may be your father or your mother, unless of course, they are in perfect accord. If they are not, it's obviously the wise thing for them to go into conferences to which of course the children are barred, and to fight out their differences and arrive at some sort of plan privately. They should, at least, present a united front to the opposing forces.

IT'S a far cry from not having anything to say or legal rights even concerning their children, to assuming entire control of them and eliminating father from the board of governors. It seems to be a feminine trait to immediately take that mile when an inch has been given, so young fathers should bear this in mind and assay their role early in the life of the child. There may be unpleasant skirmishes, but the bitter battles later in life, battles in which to their hurt

ROOSEVELT HAS ANOTHER MONEY PLAN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—UP—President Roosevelt is giving serious consideration to a plan advanced by Senator Thomas, Democrat, which would make a $4,000,000,000 profit by raising the price of gold to an ounce, the United Press learned tonight.

Copies of a bill embodying this plan, which Thomas will introduce at the coming session of Congress, have been submitted to the President and sent to the treasury and to Attorney General Cummings for an opinion.

It became known tonight that the President discussed the project with several Congressional advisers at conferences last week. He had not stated publicly his opinion on the plan, which has strong congressional support.

Under the Thomas bill all actions, regulations, proclamations and orders issued by the President or the secretary of the treasury with respect to fixing the weight of the gold dollar and with respect to the acquisition of gold by the R. F. C. or any other agency of the government would be approved and confirmed. This is intended to silence criticism directed at the legality of the administration's gold program.

The measure would call for the surrender by the Federal Reserve banks and all other holders of all gold coin or bullion to the treasury. The holders would receive in exchange gold certificates in a face amount equal to the value of the gold coin or bullion so transferred.

The reserve banks now hold in excess of $2,500,000,000 in gold bullion and currency while the treasury holdings exceed $200,000,000. The Thomas bill would prevent future gold collapse. The government's estimated $4,000,000,000 profit would come from the issuance of gold certificates based on a gold price of $41.34 an ounce instead of the statutory $20.67. Thus the currency doubled, and the increase would be sold profit for the government.

As the President considered the projected plan, some congressional leaders told the United Press that the administration's program to rehabilitate silver, announced last week, was a step in the right direction but did not go far enough. The President ordered the mint to open for receipt of 24,000,000 ounces of domestically mined silver annually, half of which is to be coined. The mint would receive 64 1/2 cents an ounce net for the metal, an increase of 19 cents over Thursday's price.

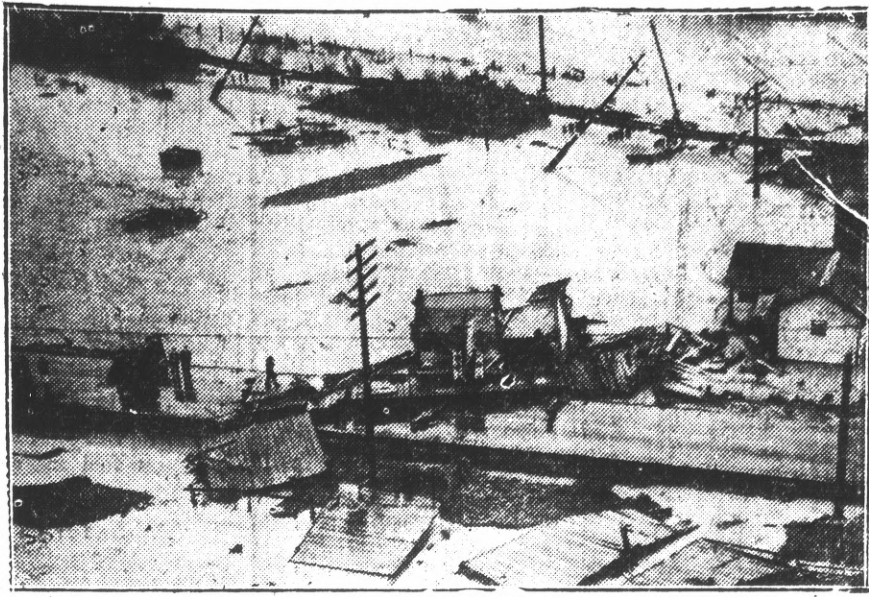

Expressing his desire to cooperate with Mr. Roosevelt on his monetary program, Senator Thomas said there was still a great need for more currency and that the fight to obtain it would go on as scheduled when Congress meets.

"I approve of what Mr. Roosevelt has done about silver, but it isn't enough," Thomas said. "There must be an even wider use of silver in the nation's currency base."

Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, expressed a similar viewpoint.

Likewise, the President's announcement...

ment did not satisfy the senatorial group, including Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Mont., which had advocated renomination of silver at a 16 to 1 ratio with gold. It was generally felt today that Mr. Roosevelt's silver plans had been announced as a "feeler" to test the reaction of the nation, since he can make further increases in the price of the white metal by executive order at any time.

SON IS BORN TO RULERS OF JAPANESE

TOKIO (Saturday) Dec. 23—UP—An heir to the throne of Imperial Japan was born at 6:39 A. M. today. The first son of Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako will be the 12th of the line if he attains manhood and succeeds to the throne, from which his father rules 95,000,000 persons by "divine right."

The nation rejoiced as the news spread with the softness of a winter wind.

Four previous children of the royal pair were girls. Three of them survive.

The emperor and his subjects had devoted hours of prayer before shrines in every part of the island empire that the next child would be a boy.

Prince Yasuhito, Chichibu-no-miya, second son of the late Emperor Taisho, had been in line for the throne.

Emperor Hirohito, the first son of the late emperor, married Frances Nagako Kuni, first daughter of H. I. H. Prince Kuni on January 26, 1921, when still crown prince.

He succeeded to the throne on December 25, 1926, following the death of his father, enthronement was officially celebrated at the ancient capital of Kyoto November 10-15, 1928, after the traditional year of mourning.

Of the three daughters of the sovereigns now living, the first was Shigeko, Teru-no-miya, born December 6, 1925, before the crowning of Hirohito.

The third daughter, Kazuko, Taka-no-miya, was born September 29, 1929.

The fourth daughter, Atsuko, Yori-no-miya, was born March 7, 1931.

Consternation was the predominant emotion expressed in court circles and throughout the land as, even time, a girl was announced.

News of the child's birth was immediately given to the press and to radio stations which broadcast the joyful tidings throughout the nation.

With the "censure" that popular tradition delivered by upon the Empress because she had not produced a son now lifted. The royal mother was expected to be one of the happiest women in the world. Court pressure had been brought upon the emperor, urging him to take a concubine.

The royal heir was born in a special building of Shinto architecture in the Fushimi, or Fountain Garden, in the western part of Chiyoda castle, the great mountain-enclosed imperial place in Tokyo.

Shinto ritualists watched his every movement from the time of his birth.

Imperial court physicians, professors in the Tokyo Imperial University and her nurses and midwives attended Empress Nagako. Wet nurses for the child were selected weeks ago. They are the healthiest women of the provinces. For weeks they have been trained in the "Yamatoto Kotoba" the court language of Japan and supposedly the tongue of the ancient Yamato tribes men who captured the islands from the hairy Ainu centuries ago and founded the mightiest empire the Orient has known. The heir will be addressed in no other language than the Yamatoto Kotoba.

U. S. Will Not Intervene in Cuba, Report

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—Indication was given today in authoritative quarters that the United States would not intervene in Cuba. President Roosevelt would not.

Acting Secretary William Phillips and other administration officials refused to make any formal statement on press demands for such a statement, some diplomatic overtures concerning intervention by the United States under the Platt amendment might be made by Spain.

Many officials doubted the Spanish government actually will bring the plight of Spaniards in Cuba to the attention of the United States.

TOMASINI GIVEN TIME ON BRIDGE PLAN

At a moment when Tiburon and Sausalito residents were mapping a fight to avert discontinuance of the Northwestern Pacific's ferry service to Sausalito, the water department yesterday granted an extension of the time limit for construction of a bridge across Richardson bay between Sausalito and Belvedere.

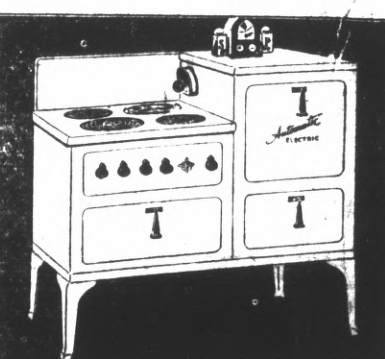

The bridge has been promoted by T. A. Tomasini as part of a general plan for a trestle tube system from Tiburon to Albany in Alameda county. Under the extension which was granted to permit plans for financing the structure, construction of the bridge across Richardson bay will be started June 29, 1934, and will be completed two years later, according to dispatches from Washington.

Aroused at prospect of substitution of a bus service around Richardson's bay for the present Northwestern Pacific ferry service, Tiburon and Belvedere, residents have threatened court proceedings to forfeit the company's franchise between San Francisco and Belvedere.

The proposed bridge, it was declared, will alleviate some of their troubles, giving them direct span access to Sausalito instead of bus service around Richardson bay. But they want the S. W. P. ferry to continue service until such relief is afforded.

The new bridge will be built from the Sausalito end of the Redwood highway to Belvedere. There, according to Tomasini's plans, it will hook up with his trestle-tube project from Point Fleming, Albany, Alameda county to Tiburon. The project involves 19,000 feet of trestle and a 17, 200 foot tube ventilated through four towers 4500 feet apart.
